A library that stays open later

Reading passage

For three weeks a neighbourhood library in Sale stayed open until 7 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays. The change was suggested by students who could not arrive before the usual 5 p.m. closing time. During the trial, 38 students used the library after 5 p.m. Most borrowed books or worked quietly in pairs.

The librarian found that the longer hours helped some students, but transport remained a problem for others. At the end of the trial, the youth council asked for one late session a week and offered to help gather feedback. The library will review the plan after one month.
